Pre-Planning Guide

What there is to decide, how it works, and why doing it now costs your family less.

Not for you

Pre-planning is for the people you leave behind. A family facing an unexpected death makes dozens of decisions in a matter of days, grieving and under financial pressure. Doing it now takes the guessing away, and it holds today's prices for whenever it's needed.

Washington Memorial Park, SeaTac. There is no cost to walk it with me, and no obligation afterward.

WHAT THERE IS TO DECIDE

Cremation or Burial?
The most fundamental choice. Each opens different options for services, caskets, and final resting place.

Where to Rest?
Cemetery section, columbarium niche, urn garden, scattering garden, or another location entirely.

Type of Service?
Traditional funeral with viewing, memorial service, graveside service, celebration of life, or private family gathering.

Casket or Urn?
Over 200 caskets and 248 urns to choose from, or let your family decide from your shortlist.

No Obligation, No Pressure

A pre-planning consultation is completely free. You're welcome to meet once, take months to decide, and come back when you're ready. Many families start with a simple conversation and return later to finalize details.

When you're ready, the arrangement is paid for when it's made, in full or on a payment plan. That's what holds today's prices, and it's what makes your wishes stick: a prepaid arrangement can't be cancelled or substantially changed by your survivors.

You can also make changes to your pre-plan at any time. Life changes, and your plan can change with it.

WHAT IT DOES FOR THE MONEY

Lock In Today's Prices

Cemetery property, services, and merchandise prices increase over time. A pre-plan purchased today is honored at today's prices, no matter when it's needed.

Flexible Payment Options

Pay in full or set up a payment plan that fits your budget. No interest on cemetery property payments.

Asset Protection

Pre-paid funeral and cemetery arrangements may be exempt from Medicaid spend-down requirements in Washington state. Consult your attorney or financial advisor for specifics.

No Financial Burden on Family

Your family won't face a large, unexpected expense during an already difficult time. Everything is taken care of.

TWO THINGS FAMILIES ASK

Is pre-planning the same as pre-paying?

With us, they go together. An arrangement is paid for when it's made, in full or on a payment plan, and that's what locks in today's pricing. The first conversation is free, and there's no obligation.

Can I change my pre-plan later?

Yes. Life circumstances change, and your plan can change with them. Contact us to make adjustments at any time.

Start with a conversation

Most families start with one conversation and nothing else. We can meet at the park, at your home, or by phone, and you are welcome to take months before you decide anything. Call or email me and I will answer whatever you want to ask, with no obligation attached to it.
